REGIMENTAL HISTORIES.

Progress Made in Securing Histories

At the meeting of the association five years ago a resolution was passed appointing me a committee of one to secure one soldier from each regiment and battalien to write a brief history of his command with a view to publication of the complete series by the State in one or more volumes. My engagements were such that under any other circumstances whom have long filled soldlers graves.

The task proved more difficult than any one could have imagined. The leaden hall of time in the thirty-odd years since the close of the war has made wider gaps in our ranks than the musketry and grapeshot of the battle-field. Company commands were hard and grapeshot of the battle-field. Com-petent men in many commands were hard to find, and among these many were diffident of their capacity, and some few were too engrossed with the business and needs of the present to be willing to assume the dury requested of them by and needs of the present to be whining to assume the duty requested of them by their comrades. I have written with my own hand more than 1,500 letters in an effort to execute the trust confided to me by you. I have succeeded in securing historian for nearly every regiment and department, and for several of the bat-As to the Seventy-third and Seventy-fourth regiments, which were Senior Reserves, the youngest living Flower member would have been nearly 80 years of age when my work began, and it was impossible to get any historian for them. Mr. President and Comrades of the Vete-ran Association: At the meeting of the association five

The object in procuring the sketch of each command to be written by one who had served therein was to have an authentic record from eye-witnesses of a part, at least, of the events recorded. For few soldiers served the entire four years in any command without absence from ounds, furlough, or other cause. To add to the correctness of these eketches therefore, the idea was conceived of having each sketch published in the news-papers circulating most largely in the secpapers circulating most infect in the sec-tion where that command was principally raised, with a request that the survivors might send in suggestions, corrections, and amendments to the regimental historian, who might make all needed changes before the sketches were finally sued in book-form.

The press of North Carolina, with the public spirit and patriotism which have always especially marked the press of this State, readily responded to this call upon their columns, for which this asso-ciation owes them grateful thanks.

spectfully submitted, WALTER CLARK. Petitions to Secure Payment for the Emparipated Slaves.

To the Editor of the Dispatch:

I rejoice to observe that the Daughters of the Confederacy in Georgia have begun a movement to carry the question of the payment for slaves freed by President Lincoln's proclamation to the Congress of the United States.

This is a movement in the right direction, and the wonder is that it has not been started long ago. I presume that the slight probability of success has hitherto prevented the consideration of the matter by the southern people.

I hope that it will now be taken up in earnest and pressed to a conclusion by our camps of veterans and Sons of Veterans, and the chapters of the Daughters. And why not? I pray to ask.

Slaves were property, acknowledged as such, and the right to hold them guaranteed by the Constitution of the country and the laws passed in pursuance thereof. From the foundation of the government no one had claimed the right to interfere with it. President Lincoln repeatedly declared that he had nather the inclination nor the power to disturb it, and jus-cause being removed, a permanent cure follows. B. B. B. thoroughly tested for connection with our just claims against the Federal Government. Let them be pushed vigorously while the Treasury is full and everybedy in a good humor and rejoicing in a high-tide of prosperity.

Cool Courage. Tallahassee, Fla., October 24, 1839.

To the Editor of the Dispatch: The letter of Mr. E. B. Surface, published in last Sunday's Issue, inquiring for the name of his wounded father's bene-factor, recalls an incident in the same battle, which is vividly impressed upon my memory.

The regiment to which I belonged had been ordered to a position on the extreme left. To reach it an open field in full view of the enemy's right and within range of their rifles had to be crossed. range of their rifles had to be crossed. The movement was executed not at the double-quick, but on a dead, run, after emerging from the woods occupied by the centre. A galling fire was opened as soon as the woods were passed, and a number of men were stricken down. Among these was Corporal Talley, Company H, First Tennessee Cavalry. He was some distance from the timber when he fell with a shattered knee. A member of the "infirmary" detail, distinguished by a strip of white tied about the upper left arm, was standing behind a large left arm, was standing behind a large oak, where nothing but a solid cannonball could have reached himwhose position was extremely perilous whose position was extremely perious, struggled to his feet, but was unable to move a step. Seeing him thus, the man behind the tree deliberately left his cover, ran out into the leaden half, and bore his wounded comrade to his own place of safety.

I have always wanted to know that coldier's name. The men were personally strangers, and the act was as fine an exhibition of simple, serens courage as I ever saw. I was lying about twenty yards further out from the timber, with two bullet wounds of my own to look two bullet would be after, and trying to get what comfort I could out of a short stump many sizes too small. We were both carried into a field hospital that night by the Federals. S. M. PROVENCIA.

The flag bearer lost it out the flag the flag bearer lost it out the stant when not in battle, and didn't discover the loss until it was too late to recover it. I suppose some of the Indiana troops found it where it was so lost. I was with the regiment at the time the flag was lost, and I distinctly recollect the circumstances. We never had a lost captured nor were we ever whipped in a fight with cavalry. I hope you will publish this. Respectfully, ## tified his proclamation only on the plea of military necessity. They (the northern people) destroyed untold militons, not only of this species of property, but of every other sort held in the Bouthern States, by their shameless acts of pillage and robbery, and at this very time, nearly forty years after the war, while falsely and hypocritically bewalling our poverty, are taxing us at the rate of fifty millions of dollars, pregumably to support their skulkers and bounty-jumpers. You remember, Mr. Editor, that thirty years ago it was not uncommon to hear the expression of the opinion that we had the moral right to repay ourselves as best we could find opportunity. While not endorsing such an opinion or approving such doubtful practices, I must say that I am not disposed to judge very harebly those who acted on them. It would seem that we have Divine authority for such spoliation of our enemies. When the Israelites were led out of Egypt by Moses in the great exodus, they were commanded to take with them some of the property of their oppressors. "The children of Israel did according to the word of Moses, and they borrowed of the Egyptians jewels of silver and jewels of gold and raiment, and they spoiled the Egyptians." "Every woman shall borrow of her neighbor jewels of silver and jewels of gold and raiment, and ye shall spoil the Egyptians." "Every woman shall borrow of her neighbor jewels of silver and jewels of gold and raiment, and ye shall spoil the Egyptians." "Every woman shall borrow of her neighbor jewels of silver and jewels of gold and raiment, and ye shall spoil the Egyptians." Will some learned scholar, skilled in the elucidation and explanation of the mysteries contained in the Hely Scriptures, be good enough to enlighten us as to the meaning of the above-quoted and similar passages, and tell us whether they justify us in recouping our losses out of the possessions of those who have despoiled and plundered us?

The word "borrowed" is a very mild and uphonious expression, and is very much abused in modern times by those who obtain under specious pretexts something which they have no means or intention of repaying.
